"More than five years after the worst terrorist attack in the history of our country, the mastermind behind it -- Osama bin Laden -- is still alive, free, and planning another attack on our country. And the President rarely even mentions his name. Instead, he pursues a failed policy in Iraq. The number of American soldiers killed in Iraq now exceeds the number of lives taken on 9/11. And the President's response is to send more troops into what is now considered a civil war. This surge is nothing more than an escalation of the failed policy that has been tried several times already. I couldn't disagree more with the President."-January 10, 2007

"President Bush has stated that he wants to enter a new era of cooperation in Washington, but his record indicates otherwise. On Iraq, he continues to ignore Congress and the American people when they tell him the current open-ended commitment must come to an end. He even ignores -- or fires -- his Generals if they disagree with him. And our soldiers continue to suffer the consequences."-January 23, 2007
